

New Website Launched

Pollution & Process Monitoring Ltd who supply and manufacture on-line water quality instrumentation and bespoke monitoring systems, have just relaunched their website.

The new site has been completely rewritten to enhance the browsing experience and to simplify navigation making sure it is both PC and mobile friendly.

The homepage now clearly identifies all the products and services available including loose instrument supply, bespoke measurement systems for both water and waste-water applications and reagent supply to support our analyser systems.

The user may still search for instrumentation by reviewing the various measurement parameters, by selecting the individual monitoring applications or by instrument manufacturer.

A new search function has been incorporated to allow rapid document selection which is especially important for the users who know their specific requirements.

In addition to categorising all the sales literature, the key compliance documentation is also itemised and available for download.

Progressively, we shall add additional application specific case studies to inform our customer base where our instrumentation has been installed and how we met the individual customer's requirements.
