With UPGUARD3000™ Neck Support System

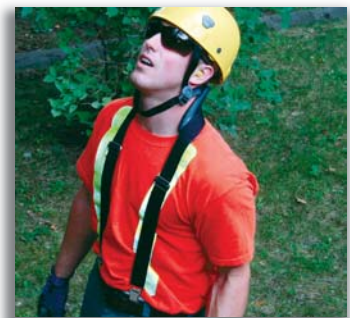

Neck Support System via its strap attachment, rests on the upper thorax (top of the back) and approaches the neck when the head is extended, or tilted backwards. The support serves as a reminder to restrict motion rather than to completely block motion. With the support resting on the upper back, the extension range of motion can be limited.

Early X-Ray studies show what is occurring within many of the neck structures with the aid of the UPGUARD3000 Neck Support System.
